

THIS "DEAD" MAN ROSE IN PROTEST

Four Doctors Had Pronounced Old Simon Greenberg Dead, but He Knew Better When Coroner Came Around.

HE DIDN'T RESPOND TO TESTS.

At the Threatened Post-Mortem Brought Him Around and He Kicked Off the Winding Sheet and Howled a Protest.

On the report of four doctors and the family that aged Simon Greenberg, of No. 144 Second avenue, had been murdered and that his shrouded body was laid out in the front room of the house, the police of the East Sixty-seventh street station arrested four men whom Greenberg, before lapsing into unconsciousness, had accused of assaulting him.

Coroner Jackson was notified by the police and went to the station, where he ordered the release of one of the men arrested, the restaurant keeper, on $10,000 bonds, and then proceeded to the Greenberg residence to make the usual post-mortem examination.

Two Men Took Him Home.
Before looking at the body Coroner Jackson was told that two strange men had taken Greenberg home last night. They said they had found him on Third avenue. The son called Dr. Isaac Fineberg, of No. 210 East Seventy-ninth street, and Dr. Goldheimer, Swansky and Brodell.

"He told us," said the son, "that on his way home from the synagogue he was frightened and hid in a doorway. He saw two men, one of whom he thought was a friend, and the other a stranger. They took him to a rooming house on Third avenue, for a friend's glazing shop. When he went in and asked how his old friend was, the four men threw him out, beating him severely, perhaps mistaking him for a beggar."

Arrests in Restaurant.
The police went to the restaurant where Greenberg said he had received his injuries and arrested William H. Kampkin, of No. 21 Third avenue; Joseph Fisher, of No. 20 West Sixty-eighth street; Herman Osterborn, of No. 210 East Eighty-first street, and the proprietor, Bernard Morchoud.

Coroner Jackson, after receiving this account of the affair, says he approached the bier in the parlor and drew the sheet from the "corpse." He observed the bruised and battered body and arranged to perform the autopsy. The last known test for life before using the knife is always applied. When Coroner Jackson did this the "corpse" shot up to an erect position and shouted:

"Corpus!" Rose in Protest.
"Don't! Don't do that! Go 'way and let me sleep!"

The startled Coroner dropped Greenberg and stood across the room a moment.

"Well, I don't care," said the son, implacably. "Four doctors said he was dead. That's all I know about it." The Coroner, recovering himself, approached Greenberg, who was now sitting erect on the bier and rubbing his eyes. The Coroner asked Greenberg to get down while he examined him, but the man would not and insisted on getting down from the narrow boards the undertaker had stretched out for him.

"That's a miserable bed to give a man his own home," said Greenberg, as he lay on his back.

A close investigation of Greenberg's injuries was made and Coroner Jackson said he was a long way from death, that his brain had been slightly jarred, causing him to become comatose. He is not badly injured and will be well in a few days.

Believed Himself a Widow.
To an Evening World reporter Mrs. Greenberg, who overnight believed herself to be a widow, said that when her husband was brought home last night by two strange men she and her son called four doctors—Fineberg, Brodell, Goldheimer and Swansky.

"To all of them my husband told about coming home from the synagogue and on his way stopping in at the restaurant. He is so dreadfully nearsighted that he mistook the restaurant for his friend Louis Komme's glazing shop, and I suppose the people in the restaurant thought he was a beggar and threw him out."

The old man declined rapidly, despite the work of the four physicians. Finally, in a convulsion, he sank back, and the doctors believed they heard the death rattle. It was noticed that rigor mortis was setting in. A doctor patted the eyelids and pressed his fingers to the ball. That is a test for life. If the subject is alive he will wince, physicians say. Greenberg lay still.

Then a hand mirror was brought out and held over the aged man's mouth. If he lived, it was said, moisture would gather on the glass. No moisture was apparent.

Stethoscope Gave No Sign.
The old reliable stethoscope was then pressed to the region of the heart and the doctors listened for the faintest pulsation. None could hear the slightest move of the heart valves and all agreed that Greenberg was dead. A sheet was called for to cover the corpse, when Mrs. Greenberg, back in her memory of days in the old country, halted the beginning of the obsequies and asked that a test she heard about two generations ago be tried.

This was to apply a lighted match to the big toe of the doubtful corpse. If the flesh did not blister it was a corpse. If a blister was raised the doubtful corpse was no longer doubtful or a corpse, but was a living person.

The Blister Appeared.
To please the old lady, a match was lighted and put to the base of the big toe on the right foot. In a moment a blister appeared. Cheered by this, the doctors commenced to work, and for three hours applied restoratives and artificial respiration methods.

Here Mrs. Greenberg's memory is a little foggy. She recalls that during the most of the night she thought she was a widow and that her husband's dead body was covered by a sheet in the parlor. She told Coroner Jackson that the doctors had said her husband was dead.

Magistrate Poot, in Yorkville Court, was in a quandary to-day when the case of the prisoners was called. The charge against them was manslaughter, but their lawyer, Joseph I. Green, volunteered the information that the victim was very much alive. The Magistrate did not know what to do, so sent them back to jail until the charge against them can be changed.

GIRL BY ERROR TAKES POISON

She Mistakes Roach Salt for Rochelle Salts, and Despite Heroic Efforts to Save Her She Dies.

The ignorance of Mary Leyden, a pretty servant girl in a boarding-house at No. 92 Madison avenue, concerning the difference between the effects of Rochelle salts and roach salts, a patent mixture for slaying cockroaches, caused her death to-day.

Coroner Scholer has decided that the girl alone was to blame. She had not been in the country long, and when she went to buy Rochelle salts at a Fourth avenue drug store the clerk probably thought she wanted cockroach poison. Mary took a liberal dose, and in about an hour became so ill that Dr. Dixon, of No. 124 Lexington avenue, was summoned.

He knew that the girl was suffering from poison and after some difficulty learned that she had taken a dose of what she thought was Rochelle salts. He found the box from which she had taken the powder. It was marked plainly, "Poison," and the fact that it was insect poison was printed on the cover.

The girl has a sister and other relatives in the city. They were notified and took charge of the body. It is not known at what drug store she bought the poison, as the name of the drugist does not appear on the box.

MRS. SIEGEL HURT IN A RUNAWAY

Was Driving to the Station at Mamaroneck When the Horse Became Frightened and Wrecked the Vehicle.

INJURIES MAY BE SERIOUS.

Her Face Is Cut and Her Back Hurt, but to What Extent Has Not Yet Been Determined.

Mrs. Henry Siegel was thrown from her carriage at Mamaroneck to-day and hurt about the face and body. Mrs. Siegel is the wife of Henry Siegel, of the Siegel-Cooper Company. She drove her home at Orienta Point, intending to take a train for New York.

The horse, a spirited animal, became frightened near the station, and ran away. The coachman was thrown out, but Mrs. Siegel remained in the carriage, clinging to the seat.

The horse ran toward a corner of the grounds surrounding the station, where it dashed into a post. The runaway was demolished and Mrs. Siegel was thrown violently to the ground. A score of persons rushed to her assistance, and she was carried into the station. A carriage was procured and she was driven home. She is cut about the face and has received injuries to her back, but how seriously she is hurt has not yet been determined.

In the accident Mrs. Siegel lost a handbag containing jewelry and papers. A reward has been offered by the family for the return of the bag and its contents.

WON'T GIVE UP KIDNAPPED CHILD

Mr. Young Appears in Court and Tells an Evening World Reporter that Those Who Seek Him Can Find Him at Office.

While private detectives engaged by the management of the Ward McAllister estate were looking in Hoboken to-day for Alexander C. Young, the young lawyer who kidnapped his child from her mother's relatives at Greenwich, Conn., Saturday, he was trying a case in the City Court here.

The former Mrs. Young was the late Ward McAllister's niece. She inherited $250,000 in her own right and was living in Elizabeth, N. J., when Mr. Young married her. She got a divorce and last week sailed away on her honeymoon as the wife of Adolphus Jorgens, the Dutch portrait painter. She left her three-year-old girl behind with the McAllisters at Greenwich.

Mr. Young got possession of his little girl by threatening with an axe every one who tried to stop him. In speaking of his experience to-day Mr. Young said:

"I haven't disappeared mysteriously. I have my child and I purpose to keep her. I have not quit Hoboken. I have simply taken up a temporary residence in New York, with offices at No. 30 Pine street. My former wife will never take my child from me. I am not evading the courts, and if there are any detectives or process servers looking for me they can find me by simply consulting the telephone book."

"I tried a case in the City Court to-day, and I am to try another case out of the State to-morrow."

Lawyer E. W. Arrowsmith, who was Mr. Young's former partner, was also seeking him to-day.

"I don't know where he is," Mr. Arrowsmith said. "His kidnapping escapade has upset all my plans. He has a case to try for me to-morrow."

That was before a reporter for The Evening World had seen Mr. Young. A writ of habeas corpus was issued by Justice Trux to-day commanding Alexander C. Young to produce Baby Louise in the Supreme Court Wednesday. The writ was issued on the petition of Mrs. Caroline Ogden McAllister, widow of the Rev. F. Morrison McAllister and stepmother of Mrs. Louise McAllister, who was Mrs. Young's wife. It was in Mrs. McAllister's custody that the child was left by its mother when she sailed for Europe after her marriage to Artist Jorgens a few days ago.

Mrs. McAllister alleged in her petition that besides kidnapping, Young threatened to kill the child with a hatchet rather than leave it in the custody of its grandmother.

News Welcome As The Golden Sunshine! Two "S. & H." Green Trading Stamps Instead of One With Your Purchases at the Siegel Cooper Store To-morrow.

INTERESTING news of important events.
ITEM ONE—To-day Shamrock III, the candidate for the honor of lifting the America Cup, will be floated, having been high and dry in the Erie Basin for some days. The initial tuning-up race between Shamrock III and I is listed to take place next Saturday.

Meanwhile the trim American yachts, Reliance, Constitution and Columbia, are flirting with water and weather.

ITEM TWO—With purchases amounting to 10c. or more to-morrow the Siegel Cooper Store will give TWO "Sperry & Hutchinson" Green Trading Stamps instead of one. Ordinarily when you buy ten cents' worth of anything you get one stamp.

TWO STAMPS WILL BE GIVEN WITH EVERY PURCHASE TUESDAY.
In other words, you get double the regular number. We have found by experience that interest in the "Sperry & Hutchinson" Green Trading Stamp proposition has been intensified to such a degree that when double the usual number of stamps is offered the demand becomes simply extraordinary. And naturally. Why shouldn't Green Trading Stamp Collectors avail themselves of a chance to fill their books in double quick time?

As an evidence of the power and popularity of the "S. & H." Green Trading Stamps, listen to this little bit of fact:

A woman who is wealthy and well known in society came to the Siegel Cooper Store recently, and after making a large number of purchases, said:

"I have been carrying a large account at Blank's store for some years, but I gave it up several days ago. I found that I could get the SAME GOODS AT THE SIEGEL COOPER STORE FOR LESS MONEY."

"Your store is much more interesting; it is the most attractive place I ever shopped in. Besides, there are the 'S. & H.' Green Trading Stamps. Why shouldn't I buy here? The Stamps do not cost me anything, and when I have my books filled I can get a very handsome premium. The Premiums are most desirable."

And she isn't the only Big Store customer with such views. There are thousands of others, profiting with equal enthusiasm. But, as we have said before, while the Trading Stamps are a pleasant and purposeful incentive, the Siegel Cooper Store places greater stress upon other advantages.

FOR INSTANCE, THERE ARE THE STOCKS.
Consider them. Mammoth and marvelous. From all parts of the world. From each side of the Atlantic and Pacific. Everything seasonable. The woman who desires a diaphanous bit of Summer drapery may purchase it here as comfortably and easily as if she came for an oil stove or a refrigerator.

Purchasing possibilities are endless here. Good bargains are continuous. They flow in and out as regularly as the tides of the sea.

Tuesday, always bristling with activity at The Big Store, springs to the front with such sterling attractions as these:
